GERMANY ATTAINS END

Germany Declines Responsibility for Further Continuation of the War.
He Declares, in Reply to Socialist Interpellation.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, wireless to Sayville, Dec. 9.—"If our enemies make peace proposals compatible with Germany's dignity and safety then we shall always be ready to discuss them," says the imperial chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, in addressing the Reichstag, the chancellor made it clear that in his opinion it would be folly for Germany to propose peace as long as the allies in the war are not ready to accept responsibility for further continuation of the war. Germany, he declared, could not be charged with the purpose of fighting on to make further conquests.

"The war can be terminated only by a peace which will give certainty that we will return to the status quo," he asserted. Germany's food supplies were sufficient and her immense stores of copper were adequate for many years.

He replied to Socialists. The address of Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, which has been awaited with extraordinary interest, was made in response to a socialistic interpellation, "Is the imperial chancellor ready to give information as to conditions under which he would be willing to enter into peace negotiations?" "As long as the countries of our enemies, the guilt and ignorance of statesmen are entangled with confusion of public opinion, it would be folly for Germany to make peace proposals which would not shorten but lengthen the duration of the war. First, the masses must be torn off their faces.

"At present we speak of a war of annihilation against our enemies. We have taken this fact to account. The theoretical arguments for peace or proposals of peace will not advance us, will not bring the end nearer.

"If our enemies will make peace proposals compatible with Germany's dignity and safety then we shall always be ready to discuss them. Fully conscious of our responsibility for the continuation of the misery which now fills Europe and the whole world, no one can say that we continue the war, because we have done what we think or that country as a guarantee."

Chancellor Is Cheered. In these words the chancellor with impassioned force stated the position of the German government in the question of peace. His remarks were cheered with great enthusiasm.

When Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg replied to the interpellation proposed by Dr. Gumbelmann, socialist leader, silence fell over the whole house, but was soon broken by manifestations of approval. Several times the speaker was interrupted by cheers. Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg began by saying that in the countries it was with Germany there had been no discussion of the socialist interpellation and that the subject was to be discussed in the Reichstag has been a source of satisfaction to those countries. This was incomprehensible in the eyes of the socialists who opened the road to Germany's Turkish allies and threatened the most vulnerable point of the British Empire.

Although this situation would explain the desire for peace on the part of Germany's enemies, he declared none of them had made overtures, but they have been clinging to intentions which they have expressed with "naïve brutality" at the beginning of the war. The chancellor then reviewed recent utterances concerning the position of Germany in the hands of France, the annihilation of "Prussian militarism," the expulsion of the German people from the Rhine, and creation of a greater Serbia, including Bosnia.

It was true, the chancellor continued, that there were some persons in countries who desired peace, but they were in the minority and their voices like those of certain members of the English house of lords were unheard. The theories advanced by Germany's enemies, he said, had lost their force. People had ceased speaking of war in terms of years. The pretext that the war was necessary for the preservation of small nations had lost its persuasive power in view of recent events in Greece.

He discussed the principle of nationality as applied by Germany's enemies. He asked whether the British colonial secretary knew that 1,900,000 inhabitants of Alsace, more than 87 per cent spoke German as the mother tongue. He asked whether the British colonial secretary knew that the nationality, whether this principle lost its power and value if applied to India or Egypt. Germany's enemies, blind at the beginning of the war by false promises, excited to hatred, were now able, after military and diplomatic defeat, to cling only to the idea of Germany's annihilation.

Socialist Makes Reply. Dr. Scheidegger was received with a degree of interest, second only to that aroused by the chancellor's speech. He reminded the house that at the beginning of the war the socialists had approved the attitude of the German government. A glance at the map, he continued, would show that Germany, conscious of her strength and successes, could now speak of peace without running the risk of being considered weak-hearted or dispirited. Dr. Scheidegger protested against the attitude of the German government in the war of much territory and also against the crusade in foreign countries in opposition to "Prussian militarism." The French, he said, should abandon the idea of annexing Alsace-Lorraine.

Don't Know How to Begin. Although Germany had won enormous successes with her armies, he continued, they had been gained at the price of heavy sacrifices. In view of the present situation, the question of peace was important in all countries. The difficulty, he said, lay in the fact that statesmen did not know how to begin negotiations.

In this connection Dr. Scheidegger spoke of the statement recently made in the English house of commons by Baron Courtenay that the British government should show itself ready to accept any suggestions which would end the war. He referred to the attitude of Italian socialists and to the utterances of Count Andrassy, former Hungarian premier. He asserted that according to reliable private information, the longing for peace in France was increasing.

Recognize War's Results. Dr. Scheidegger insisted that these remarks like those of Baron Courtenay could not be interpreted as a sign of lessening of strength, but were made in view of the fact that the war was bringing Europe to the verge of a general collapse. The words of Emperor William that for Germany this was a war of conquests were recalled by the speaker. Inasmuch as Germany had defended her frontier successfully, it was proper to ask the chancellor for an expression in regard to conditions of peace.

He declared that Germany insisted upon being treated as an equal of other nations and that the idea that Germany's hegemony was the end in view. The present moment, he declared, might become an historic one since possibly Germany might gain the glory of having been the first to speak of peace.

Tizsa Discusses Peace. Budapest, Dec. 9, via London, Dec. 9.—Count Tizsa, the Hungarian premier, in his speech at the latest session of parliament invited Rumania to resume friendly relations with Austria-Hungary and in closing adverted to the imperial chancellor's speech. He believed, probably foreshadowing a declaration in the Reichstag tomorrow by Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, German imperial chancellor, regarding peace. Count Tizsa said:

"When peace shall come depends exclusively upon our enemy. The fact that they are reaching a conviction that the further the war goes, the more useless and criminal bloodshed, the greater the victories we will win, that conviction this war lays upon us, all the more severe will peace terms be for our enemies."

War's Object Accomplished. The premier's reference to peace was in answer to remarks by Count Michael Karolyi, the opposition leader, who visited the United States shortly before the war. Count Karolyi said: "We began the war for the purpose of securing the independence of this is now accomplished, the idea of peace has become timely. Whoever takes the first step toward peace will assuredly be the victor in the end. There need be no fear that the enemy would regard the step as a sign of weakness. On the contrary, it would be a revelation of strength."

GERMANS DIFFER ON SAFETY SUFFICIENCYAmbassador Gerard Cables Resume of Germany's Note to the United States.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Dec. 9.—Ambassador Gerard B. Gardner's cables resume of Germany's reply to last American note on sinking of the American sailing ship, Wm. P. Frye. The full text of the German government's reply, forwarded by mail, and pending its arrival the state department will make no announcements. The resume was described as fragmentary. The German government declares that it is not considering "an opportunity to escape in life-boats" as sufficient safety for passengers and crew of any American vessel destroyed when carrying contraband.

The German note is in answer to American contentions that this government does not consider "an opportunity to escape in life-boats" as sufficient safety for passengers and crew of any American vessel destroyed when carrying contraband. A report that Germany declares she is unable to wholly agree with the American position was in circulation, but officials of the state department decline to discuss it.

ENTIRE ARMY STAFF

IN A DARING RAIDOfficers of Entire Germany Army Division Surprised and Taken Captives in Night Attack.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Petrograd, Dec. 9.—The entire staff of the 22nd German army division was captured by Russian scouts and brought as prisoners into the Russian lines as a result of a daring night raid recently, according to unofficial accounts which have just been received.

Advance During Night.

Under cover of darkness, a small company of scouts worked its way past the German trenches toward the German base, the report said. Emerging from a wood, the scouts found themselves close to a village. They stopped and sent forward a reconnoitering party.

Soon a German cavalry squadron galloped out of the village followed by two companies of Austrian troops. The Russians meanwhile had concealed themselves.

The Germans and Austrians fell into the ambush and became panic-stricken when the Russians opened fire. The Germans and Austrians, not knowing how large a force might be opposing them, retreated, many falling under the Russian fire.

Russians Enter Village.

The Russians followed into the village. They came upon a large estate and through the windows of the mansion made out the figures of German officers. Half of the officers of the scouts made for the mansion, while others continued their pursuit of retreating troops.

A rush for the doors of the mansion was made by ten Cossacks, the account continues, and so quick was the progress of events that the German officers did not have time to secure their coats and furs before they were hustled outside.

With the prisoners the scouts began to search the German cavalrymen meanwhile had reformed and attempted to cut off the Russian retreat. However, the Russian scouts reduced the German force with small losses. It is stated that the captured staff included two generals, one being a division commander and an general Red Cross physicians. One colonel was killed in attempting to escape.

to Say.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Dec. 9.—A wireless message from the steamer Oscar II signed by President Woodrow Wilson was received here today. The message is a summary of a speech delivered on board last night by Judge Ben Lindsay of Denver in which he declared that the spirit of love would be effective on international politics than military force.

Judge Lindsay told the peace advocates of his experience during sixteen years on the bench, drawing the conclusion that criminals respond more quickly to trust than to shackles and chains. He argued against the "preparation for war" policy, basing part of his contentions on the assertion that fire arms are unknown in the reform prison camps in Colorado except when used to protect the convicts from persons living near the camps. He compared "militaristic elements" with the "third degree policeman," and deprecated the efforts in force in either case.

Wires President. Washington, Dec. 9.—A wireless message from Henry Ford, aboard the steamer Oscar II, was received at the White House today. Mr. Ford asked the president to disregard what he termed inaccurate newspaper accounts of proceedings aboard the Oscar II and said he would personally inform the president later as to the trans-Atlantic trip.

Tentative plans for the itinerary for the preliminary procedure of Henry Ford's party of peace advocates were announced today. At Christiania, Norway, the party will remain three days, and then will be selected by the expedition of sending out invitations broadcast as was done in the United States.

Leaving Scandinavia the party proposes going direct to the Hague provided Mr. Ford can obtain permission to pass through Germany. He will agree to a no-stop trip if the Germans will only grant permission to traverse the country.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Dec. 9.—German troops are reported at the Greek border. With the Anglo-French lines reforming almost within Greek territory, it is believed here Greece cannot postpone much longer a more definite revelation of the stand she expects to take should the arena of hostilities be transferred to her soil.

Confer With Greek Commanders. Colonel Poulis of the Greek army is now conferring with the entente commander, but the Paris Press expresses fear that he is not authorized to take the full steps necessary to safeguard the interests of the Anglo-French troops. The interview given by King Constantine to the Associated Press is attracting a great deal of attention in Germany, where the opinion is general and that he has given good reasons in justification of the attitude of his country.

The plans of the French and British troops in the Balkans are still a mystery. The continued landing of reinforcements lends color to the theory that an aggressive campaign is being contemplated. At the same time the steady withdrawal of the troops from the advanced positions, leads to the belief that for the present the occupation of Saloniki as a base for operations at a later time, forms the extent of their determination.

Bulgars Fail to Gain. Athens, Dec. 9.—There has been severe fighting on the French front during the past twenty-four hours, according to press dispatches from Saloniki.

The Bulgarians are said to have made no impression on the French lines in the Bolniz-Demirkatou section. The accounts of the French army's artillery decimated the Bulgarians. According to news from other sources, the Bulgarians are concentrating considerable forces in the Strumitsa region.

Official Serbian advices place the number of Serbian troops who retired into Albania at 220,000.

The Austrian forces employed in the Serbian campaign are estimated at 20 divisions, (240,000). Five of the divisions are said to be Austrian.

SALES AND SUPPERS AT THREE CHURCHES DRAW BIG CROWDS

United Brethren, Baptist and Congregational Ladies Highly Pleased With Results of Their Efforts.

An event long planned for and the culmination of a season's hard work for the women folks of the several denominations, was held yesterday, when three of the church societies held their special sales. It was certainly a "bargain day" in Janesville, and a busy time for those interested. The United Brethren church made it an all day event, serving a cafeteria lunch at noon and a light supper at 5 p.m. Fifteen cents furnished the food, and a charge for extras in the way of pie and cake. Mrs. H. W. Kramer, Mrs. Granvow, Mrs. J. S. Taylor, and the members of the committee on the menu. About two hundred were served. Mrs. Roberts was in charge of the apron booth, Mrs. Whaley of the towel booth, Mrs. Ward of the fancy work, Mrs. Chadderton of the dolls, and Mrs. Emma Winslow of the home baking. They report a most successful sale.

The ladies of the Baptist society had arranged their wares in very prettily decorated booths, around the outer walls of their Sunday school. The King's Daughters had a booth of aprons, towels and fancy work, which did a thriving business. The Ladies Aid had a very tempting array of home baking products. They also had a display of dolls and had just finished, which was a novel of fine hand quilting. It was placed by a well known lady of the third ward, at present an invalid, and was turned over to the Ladies Aid for the quilting. The Helpful Circle always make a specialty of dolls and their wardrobe for this sale.

It is said they get donations from the ladies of the West End in the form of the occasion. They had a beautiful booth, with some very handsomely dressed dolls and any amount of fancy costumes for any occasion where dolls might be expected to appear. A foreign missionary booth had a very attractive display and their wares found a ready sale. There were several booths where candy and various articles of fancy work were sold by special classes of the Sunday school, and a very beautiful collection of knitting, crochet and bead work was shown by Miss Caroline Palmer.

The tables for supper were spread in the adjoining room and were prettily decorated with the red and green of the holly and with glowing red candles. A tempting chicken pie supper was served to about three hundred guests, under the direction of the supper committee. The ladies report that they had a splendid sale, everything being practically sold out from the several booths.

A congregational sale was held in the Sunday school room of the church and was under the direction of Mrs. McGowan, Mrs. Dedrick and Mrs. George Woodruff, who said that the president of the ladies' aid, "said they had ever had a 'bargain day' in the church is interested in this sale and contributes to it in their line of work. It is prepared for during the whole season, as articles are given out for summer work through the presidents of the different divisions of the Ladies' aid. The apron booth was supplied with over one hundred aprons at the beginning of the afternoon and the stock was practically sold out before closing time. A tea table presided over by Mrs. A. C. Hough and Mrs. Louis Avery was a delightful novelty for this occasion and a candy table contributed by a class of twenty girls had a most tempting display.

A package table in charge of Mrs. F. A. Taylor was "sold out" several times and the Christian Endeavor booth under the direction of Mrs. H. C. Buell resembled a hive of bees in its industry. These youngsters did a thriving business in candy, popcorn, balls and other small articles, and were proud as could be of their share in the work of the entertainment. A delicious chicken pie supper was served at 5:30 under the management of Mrs. F. H. Farnsworth and Mrs. V. A. Arnold, with Mrs. Arthur Granger in charge of the dining room. About four hundred people were served for supper. A delightful musical program was given in the Sunday school rooms in the evening under the direction of Mrs. J. S. Taylor, with Mrs. F. F. Lewis at the piano. The following is the program.

PREPARE FOR RUSH AT THE POSTOFFICE

Postmaster Cunningham Organizing Force to Handle Great Volume of Holiday Business.

Christmas gifts meant for friends and relatives in Belgium, Germany and Austria-Hungary from the United States, will not reach their destinations, at least not until the belligerent cease hostilities or else ease up their restrictions relative to mail. Packages are not received at the post offices of the United States for the above mentioned countries. Announcement was made today by Postmaster J. J. Cunningham that owing to the uncertainty of the mail, the postoffice department was unable to announce the dates of sailing of the liners nor to give patrons any idea as to the latest date they would be able to mail packages or mail for abroad. The idea was suggested, however, that those contemplating sending gifts, mail, etc., abroad, and having hopes that the respective packages reach their destination by Christmas, mail their articles as soon as possible. Postmaster Cunningham is arranging a schedule to be followed at the postoffice during the Christmas rush and is organizing his force accordingly. More delivery wagons are to be put out during the holidays to keep the business moving, and under ordinary conditions and to eliminate any congestion during the heaviest week of the year.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

The County Agent.

Since the last meeting of the county board of supervisors, I have noticed the publicity given the county agent idea.

Thank Heaven, our representative, Mr. Marquart, was not in favor of wishing a county agent on us before we know what it was all about.

Now do Rock county farmers want a consulting agent (whose services at best would be largely theoretical), at a salary of $2,000.00 per year?

All the service a county agent could give is now offered to every farmer in the state by our state university. The state is now maintaining a laboratory for the testing of soils, infection of live stock, and so on.

And remember this, the first appropriation is only the opening wedge. As soon as we have a county agent you will see that the duties of the office are so heavy that they require the services of a deputy and so on and so forth.

Another thing, who is it that has the agricultural welfare of the county at heart? Is it the farmers that own their land free of debt? Or is it the progressive farmers whose fathers left them their farms free of debt and who have since improved these same farms by mortgaging them for all they will stand?

Look around, which kind of men are agitating this county agent idea? Now call up or write your representative on the county board, city people as well as farmers, give him your stand on the county agent idea.

BELOIT BASKETBALL FIVE GAVE ROCKFORD HARD GAME

That the Lakota Cardinals will have no easy time to beat the Beloit team who play at the Auditorium in this city Friday night, is evidenced from the fact that the Beloiters with a crippled lineup came near defeating Rockford C. K. recently. The score was 16 to 12, and closely contested throughout. Since Paul Meyers cannot play with the Lakotas an attempt is being made to secure Stavrum, an other varsity football and basketball player, to fill in the position of Korst.

ORDERS GIVEN OUT FOR PROPER CARE OF HORSES

Orders were given by P. D. Champion, chief of police, to patrolmen for the proper care of horses during the cold weather while the animals are left standing on the streets. The officers were instructed to see, as far as possible, that horses are blanketed and not to allow owners to let the animals stand for any long period on the streets. In case that horses are found standing on the streets, unprovided, the patrolmen were directed, after a reasonable time, to have the horses stabled. "People should appreciate the fact that a horse suffers from cold weather as well as humans and act in accordance," said Chief Champion.

GIBBONS IS ILL; BOUT POSTPONED

Bout Between Gibbons and Ahearn Postponed at Least a Week—Smith Wins on a Foul

St. Paul, Dec. 9.—Postponement for at least a week of the Mike Gibbons-Young Ahearn ten-round contest, originally scheduled to take place here the night of Dec. 10, was announced by the promoters tonight because of the illness of Gibbons, who is suffering from a severe cold that threatens pneumonia.

No one will be substituted for Gibbons, as has been suggested. If Gibbons is able to resume training next Monday, the bout will take place Dec. 11th.

Ahearn consented to as long a postponement as is necessary for Gibbons to get into condition, saying he wished to meet the local boxer "at his best."

Foul Wins Fight. Boston, Mass., Dec. 8.—After having battled Jeff Smith of Bayonne, N. J., all the way round the ring for the best part of seven rounds, George Chip of Pittsburgh was disqualified last night by "Young Donahue," the referee. There is no doubt that had the bout gone to a finish Chip would have been proclaimed winner.

Bartfield vs. Lewis. New York, Dec. 8.—Soldier Bartfield, the most awkward fighter in the eastern scrap situation, has been substituted for Mike Glover against Ted Lewis in Boston next Tuesday. Charlie Wulbert, the young heavyweight who came shaded Jim Savage, has signed to meet Savage again on Dec. 16 for ten rounds.

CRONIN'S FIVE DEFEAT LEARY'S BARBERS' TEAM; K. C. TEAMS ROLL

Leary's Barbers failed to make good last night at the Miller alley when they rolled the Cronin Daffy five. The daffy men defeated them by a large margin of 271 pins. George Cronin took the high honors with a score of 176 pins.

K. C. League. In the K. C. League with six men teams the Champlains defeated the Sotos and the Columbus six won from the La Salles by a close margin. No one touched the two hundred mark, 177 being the highest score made.

At Beloit. The Sox went down to the Line City and met defeat at the hands of the Redman's Lions. In all three events they were unable to get ahead of the Beloit team.

Some of the biggest plums in football are about ripe to be picked. Yale, Wisconsin, the Michigan Aggies and the Army are the biggest eleveners trying to dig up a winning coach. Frank Hinkle's team failed at Yale. Bill Juneau put under fire at Wisconsin. Charles Brooke couldn't produce a winner for Pennsylvania, and Charles Daly, West Point mentor, was called away on a soldiering job. John Macklin resigned as M. A. C. coach.

MEYERS WILL LEAD BADGERS IN 1916

Athlete Who Played Basketball With Reserves Here, Elected Captain of Wisconsin Eleven.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 9.—Paul D. Meyers of Milwaukee, was elected captain of the 1916 University of Wisconsin football team at the football banquet Wednesday night, and will lead the Badgers in 1916. Meyers, a reserve player, was presented with a silver loving cup by the players in appreciation of his work on his last Wisconsin eleven.

Fifty members of the squad were present in addition to Coaches Juneau and Driver, Manager Stang, and Athletic Director Ehler. The senior members of the team made speeches as did the coaches, and there was an impressive scene in the banquet hall when Coach Juneau bade farewell to the last varsity team that he would coach. The men all seemed mighty sorry to see Juneau leave the university, and Capt. Buck presented the large silver cup in token of their appreciation.

This is the first time since Jack Wilce, the present coach of Ohio State, that a Milwaukee boy has been elected to lead the Badger football squad. Meyers played his first year on the right end of the varsity this fall. He is only a sophomore, but received his election over Kreutz, a senior, when Dow Myers, who was expected to get the job, withdrew his name because of an uncertainty as to whether he would be able to return next fall. Byers was silent as to the rumor that he had been married to Miss Bessie Williams of Des Moines but said that he would go to work next semester, and that he might not return next fall. His loss would seriously handicap the work of the 1916 eleven, but there is still hope of his return.

Meyers is only a sophomore, and hopes to play two more years on the team, but his stellar work this year brought him the job over the others. He received his first football training under Doc Angell of Milwaukee Normal, where he played quarter for two years. He went to East Division High school, but while there was too small to make the team and played on the "Belmonts," the well known leader of east side backyard eleveners.

MORRIS MILLER

The New York Yankee owners are making the right kind of an effort to strengthen their team by the acquisition of Frank Baker, the Athletics' slugging third baseman. Instead of leaving it to someone else to find out where Baker stands, Captain Huston and Manager Bill Donovan had a conference with Baker at Wilmington, Del., the other day, the trio having dinner together. No announcement was made as to the object of the confab, but it stands to reason that the New York magnates found out whether Baker would be satisfied to go to New York what salary he would expect and other details they should know before they start negotiations with him. Mack for the purchase of the third baseman. In Chicago it is the report that Comiskey will offer Mack a fabulous sum during the league meeting to be held there December 15, and that the sum will be so great that others wanting Baker will have to withdraw. But the league will be in favor of Baker going to the Yankees, where his presence may be of great benefit to the league.

A wave of Bill Holtenbach enthusiasm has struck the Pennsylvania football camp. Students are backed strongly by the alumni, who would like to see Big Bill in charge of the Quaker squad next fall. Holtenbach starred as a coach at Penn State and the Pennsylvania Military Academy. He has expressed a willingness to return to his alma mater, but only as head coach.

Virginia Barnette (3), 2:08½, is the only trotter, other than Lee Ax, who has won two heats from Peter Scott this season.

Over in St. Paul they are billing the Mike Gibbons-Young Ahearn 10-round bout, December 10 as a world's championship middleweight contest. No one of his weight has a chance to beat Mike in ten rounds. Even should the unexpected come to pass Ahearn could not claim the title. Not with Jack Smith and Les Darcy still in the ring. Nevertheless the bout is an important one. For one thing it ought to give the boys a line on Gibbons' condition. Some critics have claimed Mike is going back, and his last two performances certainly haven't been at all favorable to him.

Jim Scott and Buck Weaver of the White Sox are in vaudeville. They were in Detroit the other day in some sort of a sketch, and left not long enough to talk baseball. Both contend that the Sox will win the pennant next season. They argue that Comiskey has the strongest team in the league, and that it will be a cakewalk for them to win the flag. But they are very apt to have occasion to change their minds unless Comiskey makes some decided changes in his team. One of the weakest spots is Weaver's position at short. So long as Weaver did not have Eddie Collins' pace to contend with he played fair ball; but last year he was one of the poorest shortstops in the league, and Comiskey would be tickled if he could find some fellow who could fill the bill to better advantage.

The Commercial Exchange of Burlington asked some action on the matter of a ball team in the Central Association next year, passed a resolution favoring a team. Resolutions, however, do not pay salaries of players and Burlington still is in a lull.

President Bill Bourke of the Omaha Western league club, in an interview, says one reason they opposed Tip O'Neill as president of the league was that the organization wasn't getting the right sort of publicity. That may be true, but just how Bourke blames O'Neill for it is not clear. Perhaps if Tip had told all he knows the publicity would have been even more of the undesirable kind.

The Salt Lake club of the Coast league announces that Cliff Blankenship has been retained to manage the Bees for next year. It was never supposed the club would do otherwise than re-engage Blank, but the official announcement is welcomed at that.

With the passing of Pitcher Tom Dougherty from the American Association through his sale by Milwaukee to Oakland, Harry Clark, manager of the Milwaukee team, becomes the oldest player in point of service in the association. Clark has been in the league more than twelve years.

George Stallings secured Sherwood Magee from Philadelphia because he believed he had just about won the pennant again for the Braves. Magee then proceeded to upset the dope and batted thirty-four points less than in 1914.

Milton Stock, one of the players who figured in the trade with Philadelphia whereby Hans Lohr came to the Giants, has been traded to the Browns for the former Philadelphia.

FARMERS DECRY RED TAPE IN FEDERAL BANKS

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 9.—Are the farmers receiving any real benefits from the establishment of a federal reserve bank in this section? The convention of 6,000 mid-west farmers was expected to go on record as saying no to that question when it is put up to them at the final session of the Equity Co-operation Exchange here today.

The farmers' complaint against the reserve bank methods of loaning money to farmers and to farm hands, is that there is too much red tape about it. Officers of the exchange, while admitting that the theory of the federal reserve bank is good, declared that in practice too many obstacles were put in the way of the farmer.

"SPEAR HEAD" AN OLD TIME FAVORITE

The Most Popular Chew for a Third of a Century

PURE, RICH, FRUITY-SWEET

The man who chews gets by far the most wholesome enjoyment and satisfaction out of tobacco, especially if he chews plug tobacco. The rich juices of the leaf are retained in good plugs better than in any other form.

For more than a generation Spear Head has held first place as the favorite high-grade plug chewing tobacco.

This unique distinction is due solely to the wonderful quality and flavor of Spear Head—the richest, mellowest, tastiest chew in the whole world.

Spear Head is the choicest of all red Burley, hand-stemmed and made into mellow-sweet plugs in a perfectly clean, most sanitary factory.

You can't chew the flavor out of Spear Head, because it's a part of the tobacco. That rich, ripe red Burley taste keeps on pleasing you as long as you keep on chewing.

Chew Spear Head and you'll be chewing the purest and most satisfying tobacco that it's possible to make. In 5c and 10c cuts.

PREPAREDNESS.

This is a day of preparedness. It is being preached the length and breadth of the nation. If the republicans of Wisconsin wish to be prepared for the strenuous campaign of next year, at which time a president, a United States senator, a governor and a legislature are to be chosen they must take time by the forelock and look into the question of who are the best candidates available for the various offices.

There is no reason why this republican state of ours should be represented by men in both houses of congress who vote with and are not the dictation of the democratic party even though some of them have arrived at their desired goals under the republican banner.

There is no need for any change in the present chief executive of the state who is doing so much for the taxpayers and voters by installing a business administration and bringing order out of chaos.

It is time to look into this question of preparedness and be ready for the onslaught that will be made upon republican principles by the unprincipled "tax-eaters" who are sorely disappointed because their soft berths have been taken away from them by the watchfulness of a man who believes in business and economy.

This is the time to look matters squarely in the face, not later when the time has passed for action, and from top to bottom the republicans of Wisconsin want to give their support to true republicans and not to skillful politicians who make a professional living by holding office, be it great or small.

EARLY RISING.

Millions of people in Europe today have adopted new hours for work, play and sleep. On account of the menace of Zeppelin raids, and the necessity of darkening streets, they go to bed early and are up correspondingly soon in the morning. The new schedule of time is popular and may prove permanent after the war.

The idea of daylight saving, by setting ahead the clocks, or other plan to conform more nearly to the hours of the sun, has been much discussed in this country. There is something about the rays of the sun. The wide prevalence of eye troubles is due largely to artificial light. The fresh air of morning have their own charm, and they incite to vigorous effort.

Take a date when the sun is rising at 6 a. m. and setting at 5:30 p. m. The man who lies in bed until seven o'clock is missing at least an hour and a half of daylight. Looking at it from the economical viewpoint, he is burning electricity, oil, or gas, for an hour and a half more at night, than would be necessary were he to get up at 5:30 and go to bed correspondingly early. This is quite an item in running a house. If he has a store or a factory, his bill for lights at the end of the day is largely needless.

But prudential considerations like these are lost on the majority of people. Lighted streets, stores, restaurants, and places of amusement of city life, set many persons' blood a-tingling and provoke good cheer. The idea of sitting up late nights after "other folks have gone to bed" suggests a jolly bohemianism. Young persons looking for shady corners are not the only ones who feel that way.

To those of romantic disposition, the hours of darkness have a peculiar charm. While daylight seems prosaic. The philosophers may talk all they want to, but between the sentimentalists, the sports, and the young folks, daylight saving and early rising are unpopular causes. The sensible standard time idea was carried through against much opposition, by the united action of the railroads. There is no such unified interest to promote early rising and daylight saving.

THE CHRISTMAS DISPLAYS. It is always a pleasure to look through our newspaper advertising at this time of year, with all the suggestions of holiday good cheer that it brings. Reading the advertisements about gifts, luscious food, and winter supplies seems like walking along in front of the show windows in some brilliantly lighted street.

Even if one can not afford to buy much of all these good things, there is a pleasure either in looking at them or reading about them in the newspaper. And most of us get some share of them.

For sensible-minded people there is no end of useful presents in clothing, furniture, and dry goods. For the children there is the same old bewildering array of toys. For good lives there are the fruits and goodies and substantial of the year. For all which the public is referred to our advertising columns, for a real "human interest" story.

SENTIMENT CHANGED.

The fact that President Wilson's much vaunted popularity had resulted in the election of a republican governor of Massachusetts, for the first time in five years, in turning a democratic majority in his own state, New Jersey, into a republican majority of more than 33,000; of reducing a normal democratic majority in Kentucky from 31,000 to less than 500, and electing a republican secretary of state; in reducing the democratic majority of 1907 in Maryland of 8,000 to less than 3,000 this year have all been chronicled in these letters. In the reports of the elections, however, one more significant fact was overlooked. In the neighboring state of Virginia the democratic majority in the house of delegates was reduced to a lower figure than has obtained during the last ten years. The republicans have fourteen, and possibly fifteen, seats in the house. Realization of the financial disaster which would come to this country should the war, with its artificial and uneven prosperity, end before the arrival of revised along protection lines, does not appear to be confined to republican states by any means.

It is strange that everything that Germany does is hailed with shouts of approval by the former residents of the kaiser's domain, even to the sinking of passenger steamers and killing innocent passengers. But let anyone mention an English or French bit of strategy by an adherent of these countries, it is rank treachery in their minds. There is no happy medium between the two. The rape of a peaceful country, destruction of a nation by wholesale slaughter, bombardment of peaceful villages and home communities by airships, are all correct if done under the sanction of the kaiser or one of his allies. Let England bring in its colonial troops, and the cry is raised that savages are brought to fight against civilized people. Just what class the Turks can be classed with is not solved, but any nation that will wipe out an entire people, as they did, for religious purposes, can certainly not be above a dark-skinned follower of the flag of Great Britain from India.

Henry Ford and his peace party may have a peaceful and happy journey to foreign shores, but it is safe to say that the Golden Rule of this band of Argonauts desire to bring back will not be in the shape of a world-wide peace. It is really doubtful if they are given any sort of recognition across the water after all, but at any rate the guests of the millionaire will have had a most enjoyable trip, thanks to his whims and generosity.

The Greece of today is evidently far more Athenian in spirit than Spartan. It is even doubtful if an invasion of its land by the Turks would do more than bring forth a mild protest from the orators in Athens who seem to hold the balance of power.

There are a lot of property-owners who had new walks ordered in who have neglected to comply with the requirements, just as many other property-owners will forget to clean the walks already laid after the snows come and ice is found in plenty.

Japan's ruler is the only emperor in sight who has time for a coronation ceremony, although Frederick of Bulgaria would like to reach St. Sofia long enough to have a crown thrust upon his brow.

Much less is being heard about the European monarchs these days than was a year ago. Have you noticed it? It is the men in the pits and on the firing line who now demand attention.

Japan probably does not want China to become a monarchy because there might be a rival coronation that would detract from the impressiveness of the Japanese ritual.

At last the women of the country can breathe freely. The date for the Gault-Wilson wedding has been decided upon. Postmasters please take notice. No comment.

Outside of lawyers and life insurance agents, there isn't much of a profession in this country. Squaring Himself. A philanthropist lately visited a Michigan infirmary not long ago and displayed great interest in the inmates. One old man, particularly, gained her compassion. "And how long have you been here, my man?" she inquired.

"Do they treat you well?" "Yes." "Do they feed you well?" "Yes."

After addressing a few more questions to him the visitor passed on. She noticed a smile broadening on the face of her attendant, and on asking the cause heard with consternation that the old man was none other than the medical superintendent.

She hurried back to make apologies. How successful she was may be gathered from these words: "I am sorry, doctor, will never be governed by appearances again."

"Pay Up Week" Failed to Work Both Ways. "Last week was 'pay up week' at Charlotte, a fact which was extensively advertised with the hope that everybody in the community would be able to square their debts at that time. Much Applause. You never can tell. It sometimes takes a wise man to conceal the fact that he knows anything.

Saladay Dickers, the new school director, was making his first speech. My friends," he began bravely, without even looking at his notes, "the schoolwork is the bulwark of civilization—that is, ha, ha—I mean, the bulwark is the schoolwork of civilization."

Very much disturbed, he took out his name and blew his handkerchief. He began again: "The workhouse is the bulwark of civilization."

He began to feel that perhaps "he was twisted, somehow."

"The school is the housework—Mopping his teeth and gritting his perspiration, he made a fresh start: "The schoolhouse, my friends—"

At last! Saladay Dickers was himself again. He gazed confidently around at his audience and serenely bit off a fresh chew of tobacco.

Chitching his eyes and rolling his hair, he lost consciousness and fell with a sickening thud into the water picher.

LIGHT CAR SWERVES AND TURNS TURTLE; NELSON FRANCIS HURT

Youth Suffers Slight Concussion of Brain—Robert Carle Escapes With Minor Bruises.

Nelson Francis, son of John B. Francis of the Janesville Clothing company, is under the attention of physicians and a nurse at his home, 25 East street, north, as the result of an automobile accident between four and five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Robert Carle, son of Norman L. Carle, was in the wreck, but escaped with a slight shaking up. Francis suffered a concussion of the brain. The doctors today report that the shock was but of slight nature and at noon said that he was improving nicely.

The accident occurred at the foot of the Milwaukee hill, south from Monterey bridge and just across the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway right of way. Carle was driving, after crossing the bridge, began to push his engine to negotiate the hill. They were traveling about twenty miles per hour as they crossed the tracks when a rough spot in the road swerved the car violently to the right. Carle, with a desperate movement sought to swing the steering gear around to keep the road. The quick movement disarranged the apparatus and with the impetus from the speed and the jerk to the side, caused the high machine to turn turtle.

Carle was not injured, but the body of the machine but Francis was unable to loosen himself and the car came down on his head.

Help was not long in reaching the scene and the car body was lifted from the youth. He was bleeding profusely from the ears. He was removed to his home. Aside from the head injury he suffered minor cuts and lacerations.

OBITUARY.

Frances Helen Bailey.

Frances Helen Bailey, a life long resident of Janesville, passed away early Wednesday morning. The house in which she was born, twenty-one years ago is one of the old landmarks on North Main street. Nearly sixty years of her life was spent in the city. Although she had been ill for some time, she was very active in the east and west, to her there was no place like home.

About two years ago her health failed. Hardly a day passed without gradually undermined her strength, and finally resulted in a paralytic stroke three weeks ago from which she could not rally. She was a consistent member of the Episcopal church, of a mild, gentle nature, always ready to lend the helping hand, and was beloved by all who knew her.

Funeral services for the late Mary Kimball will be held tomorrow afternoon at two-thirty o'clock from her home at 112 Cedar street. Rev. Hazen, pastor of the Baptist church, will conduct the services and interment will be made in the Oak Hill cemetery.

But Burke was now more fully aroused to the situation. After all, perhaps the purse found by him did not belong to the woman before him, whose name it contained. In that case, of course, his journey from Long Branch, prompted by his innate honesty and the hope of a reward, had been in vain. He could not be expected, of course, to give up the purse to any one without a clear claim on it. In that case he had the next right to its contents legally. It was perhaps a little admixture of greed in his nature, therefore, that prompted him in replying:

"Well, if you haven't lost one—"

"It's just possible that you've made a mistake, May," said Strickland, and to Burke, "Let Mrs. Strickland look at it."

"I'd rather have you describe it first," said Burke.

"Oh, yes, of course! You haven't more than two or three purses, May. Describe them to Mr. Burke."

Again May Strickland persisted in the fatal course of prevarication that was to cost her dear. She insisted:

"But I haven't lost a purse."

Strickland was insistent. "I know, but it would only take a moment to describe them."

"Well," said May reluctantly, "there's my mesh bag, with the oxidized silver purse."

"No, that's not it," said Burke. "There's that green leather bag you gave me for my birthday."

Burke rose and, taking up his hat, began to walk to the door. "No, I knew it wasn't," he said.

But Strickland checked him. "Wait a moment, May, you've forgotten that French black velvet affair you usually carry."

Burke looked sharply at him. "What kind?" he asked.

"Black velvet with a gold clasp," said Strickland.

Burke drew from his pocket and held up a purse which answered Strickland's description. "This it," he said.

"Why, yes; of course. Isn't it, May?" The woman saw that further subterfuge was useless. In a faint voice she admitted:

"Yes, it looks like it. I—I don't understand."

"You see, you were so positive," said her husband, and Burke asked, "How much was in it, May?"

"About $40, I think."

"That's right," said Burke. "Thirty-eight dollars and seventy-five cents. Count it, sir."

Strickland took the purse and counted the money. Then he put it back way. There was nobody home but an old housekeeper. She said she didn't know any one named Strickland, but there'd been a lady there yesterday. So I thought I'd come to the address on the card."

"I see," said Strickland. "Well, we're greatly obliged to you, Mr. Burke."

Burke again started toward the door, but Strickland held him back with:

"Hold on; hold on! You're entitled to some compensation for your trouble."

He thrust his hand into his own pocket and took out a roll of bills from which he selected some that he handed to Burke. The amount of the reward made the eyes of the honest newsdealer glisten. "Thank you very much, sir," he said.

"Not at all. We're indebted to you," said Strickland.

"Well, I always say that honesty is the best policy."

"Quite right," was Strickland's answer. "Let me show you to the door."

"Good night, mum. Good night, sir," said Burke, and he left the room, followed by Strickland.

During the short colloquy between the two men May Strickland had stood silent at the side of the room. In her face were plainly to be seen the workings of great emotion. The twitches of her hands and face were beyond all control, a fact that would have been apparent to her husband and Burke without effort had they not been interested in each other's statements. The emotion that was uppermost in her soul and that showed itself most plainly in her features was fear—horror-stricken fear.

It was still there during the short absence of her husband from the room to escort Burke to the outer door and it was plain when Doris entered the library from her bedroom.

"Oh, mamma," cried the child, "you found your purse, didn't you?"

"Yes, darling. Now you may go."

"But I can't sleep," said Doris.

"Then how did you happen to go down to see her yesterday?"

"She wrote, asking me to come down."

Strickland seated himself at the table, put his elbow on the table and rested his chin on his right thumb between that member and the fingers. When he spoke next the words came slowly:

"You haven't met her for years; then she suddenly asks you to come down to Long Branch to see her. Why didn't she come to see you?"

With terrible, eager insistence, although she felt herself slipping, slipping down the precipice of her fate, May Strickland still fled to her husband. As is usual in such cases, her mind moved at terrible speed, sending the words almost trippingly from her tongue. She had gone too far to retreat. She must at all costs convince Robert now: Was that Doris moving uneasily in the next room? Oh, for her child's sake she must go on and on and on!

"She's critically ill, and she wanted to see me again." The words came fast and faster. "So she had me looked up. We used to be quite intimate in school."

It seemed that Strickland expected a reply to this remark, although it was not put in the form of a query. Therefore when May remained silent he made the question more direct.

"Where you?"

The admission was made in a low voice—"Yes."

"But you said before that you'd been shopping."

"That was on account of Doris."

"On account of Doris?"

There was a puzzled look on Strickland's face. Jealousy had never entered into the relations of himself and his beloved wife. He wore her love as a monarch might wear the brightest jewel in his crown, as a knight might bear in his helmet the gage which he dared the world to pluck away, confident that the feat was beyond human power. In all things he trusted her implicitly. Why not? Never in all the years of their love had she deceived him. The very thought that she might lie to him could never find lodgment in his brain. Other women might have secrets from their husbands, but his May—never!

"But you told me the same thing after Doris had gone to bed," he went on.

"Did I? I couldn't have been thinking of what I was saying."

"Yes, you even mentioned that you were looking for a traveling dress."

"Queer, isn't it. My thoughts must be wandering tonight. The excitement of your homecoming and all that."

"What took you to Long Branch?" asked Robert.

Here came a diversion, welcome beyond all telling to May. She saw in the entrance of Robert, the maid, a sign of relief, a reprieve from her husband's band's insistent questioning that would give her time to collect her thoughts, to frame an explanation of the visit to Long Branch.

"Mr. Strickland's dinner is ready," said the maid. And May added: "You'd better go in, Robert. Everything will get cold."

"All right, Bertha; I'll be there in a moment," said Strickland, and the girl left. May laid a hand on her husband's arm in gentle insistence. "But you must eat, dear. You'll be ill if you don't."

"In a moment," said Robert. "Just tell me about Long Branch. I don't quite understand it."

"I'll tell you some other time. I'm tired now, and your dinner is waiting."

"Won't you tell me why you went down there? You didn't write that you were going. Why are you acting so strangely, dear?"

"I'm not acting strangely. Of course I'll tell you why I went down. I went down to see a friend."

"I didn't know you had friends at Long Branch."

"You don't know her."

"Who is she?"

CHAPTER XI.
"No. 206 Henderson Place."

In the manner of the wife there was a slight pause—oh, so very slight a pause—and at this time, as the attention of the husband was fixed without possible deviation on his wife, he noted the change in her. At the time it made little impression upon him, but afterward, in the long hours of meditation which came to him, it seared itself on his tortured brain. The pause seemed insignificant to him, although it was probably only a fraction of a second before she replied:

"Ruth Green is her name."

"Who's Ruth Green?"

"An old school friend of mine. I haven't seen her for years."

"Then how did you happen to go down to see her yesterday?"

"She wrote, asking me to come down."

Strickland seated himself at the table, put his elbow on the table and rested his chin on his right thumb between that member and the fingers. When he spoke next the words came slowly:

"You haven't met her for years; then she suddenly asks you to come down to Long Branch to see her. Why didn't she come to see you?"

With terrible, eager insistence, although she felt herself slipping, slipping down the precipice of her fate, May Strickland still fled to her husband. As is usual in such cases, her mind moved at terrible speed, sending the words almost trippingly from her tongue. She had gone too far to retreat. She must at all costs convince Robert now: Was that Doris moving uneasily in the next room? Oh, for her child's sake she must go on and on and on!

It seemed that Strickland expected a reply to this remark, although it was not put in the form of a query. Therefore when May remained silent he made the question more direct.

"Where you?"

The admission was made in a low voice—"Yes."

"But you said before that you'd been shopping."

"That was on account of Doris."

"On account of Doris?"

There was a puzzled look on Strickland's face. Jealousy had never entered into the relations of himself and his beloved wife. He wore her love as a monarch might wear the brightest jewel in his crown, as a knight might bear in his helmet the gage which he dared the world to pluck away, confident that the feat was beyond human power. In all things he trusted her implicitly. Why not? Never in all the years of their love had she deceived him. The very thought that she might lie to him could never find lodgment in his brain. Other women might have secrets from their husbands, but his May—never!

"But you told me the same thing after Doris had gone to bed," he went on.

"Did I? I couldn't have been thinking of what I was saying."

"Yes, you even mentioned that you were looking for a traveling dress."

"Queer, isn't it. My thoughts must be wandering tonight. The excitement of your homecoming and all that."

"What took you to Long Branch?" asked Robert.

Here came a diversion, welcome beyond all telling to May. She saw in the entrance of Robert, the maid, a sign of relief, a reprieve from her husband's

Dinner Stories

While Abdul Hamid was still upon the throne of Turkey the president of the American Missionary College at Tarsus sent to New York for a large consignment of textbooks. In due time all except the chemistries came safely. At first the president could not find out what was the matter, but finally the commissioner of the port sent for him. "It is not for you to complain," said the officer, "but it is for you to give thanks to Allah that you did not follow your diabolical books into the flames. Here is one copy that we saved for a witness. Not all of its deadly ciphers could we read, but this is plain even to the eye of a babe." Pointing to the symbol, H2O, he read, with triumphant air and voice, "Hamid it is nothing!"

A man once was talking about hard luck, and his friend was listening with a sour expression.

"Why, you don't know what hard luck is!" said the friend. "I have at ways had it. When I was a kid there was such a bunch of us in the family that there had to be three tables at meal times, and I always got the third one."

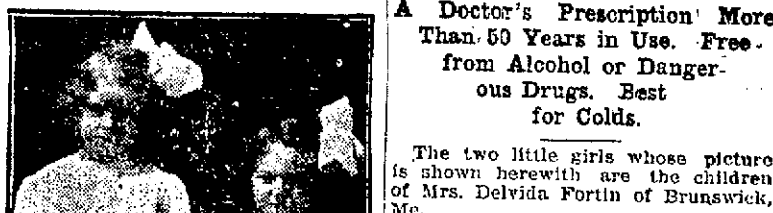

"What's hard about that?"

"Why," said the friend, "it was fifteen years before I ever knew a chicken had anything but a neck."

CANNING COMPANIES
BROKE LABOR LAWS

Legal Action Against Alleged Violators To Be Started at Request of Industrial Commission.
(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Madison, Wis., Dec. 9.—Legal actions against several canning companies for violation of the law limiting the employment of women and children soon will be started by the attorney general at the request of the industrial commission. The suits will involve amounts of money running from $500 to $10,000. The canning season of 1912, 1913 and 1914 there were fourteen similar suits involving payments of more than $2,500 in penalties, the highest single penalty being $500 and the lowest $300.
Three years ago the industrial commission, under legal authority, granted special concessions to the canners because of the peculiar necessities and unusual conditions of the industry. Most of the companies were able to get along without overstepping the legal bounds, while others practically ignored the law and put profits before the statutes. These were punished in the hope that they would do better the next season and as an example to other canners. During the summer of 1914, however, some unusually flagrant violations and the industrial commission, which administers the law, had no option in the nature of actions in debt, each separate violation constituting a separate count with a penalty of from $100 to $1,000. All of the suits will be before the court in the next few days. The actions soon to be started by the attorney general are against canning companies in Sheboygan, Eau Claire, Chippewa and other counties.

CHARGED FOR PERJURY IN MONROE COMPLAINT

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Monroe, Wis., Dec. 9.—Charged with perjury, E. J. Griffiths, a former resident of Monroe, has been returned to this city from Chicago, in the custody of Sheriff M. E. Solbraa, who had been in that city for several days following his trial.
The charge which has been brought against Griffiths is an echo of the action for divorce by Mrs. Nettie S. Wright, a well known woman and a social leader of this city, at which time he testified that he was, with-out funds, being therefore unable to pay between $7,000 and $8,000 which he had borrowed from Mrs. Wright within a short time after their marriage. The complaint alleges that the testimony given at that time was false, that the accused had money in the Illinois Trust & Savings bank in Chicago, and in addition to preventing proper action which would have restored to Mrs. Wright the amount, he at least a portion of her marriage, it also caused her to refrain from making a plea for alimony.
Griffiths is a gentleman prisoner. Far be it from him to be detained in gaol, if he can prevent it. Griffiths is under the personal charge of Deputy Sheriff Earl Summerlin and Rumors are current in Monroe that Mrs. Wright is not the only woman in Wisconsin who has lost money in loaning the same to Griffiths, it being alleged that a well known Madison woman has also been deceived.

The case is being closely followed by Monroe residents who are in sympathy with Mrs. Wright, who is a highly respected citizen.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. E. A. LEONARD

"What is this?" asked John Suter, pointing to a sewing machine on his way to the kitchen. "That is my new sewing machine," confessed Molly in a tone meant to be conciliating. "I bought it on the installment plan. You should get it," he said. "I should," she replied. "I don't understand how you could do that." "I am going to learn to sew, and I must have a machine. I cannot get a machine any other way. I have not the money. We can surely spare fifty cents a week to add to the weekly allowance. That's all I asked for. I don't want to pay more than that." "How much was the cash price?" "I think he said forty-five dollars, but I did not listen very carefully, for I knew that was out of the question." John went on to the closet and hung up his coat. He was very silent. "You do not like it because I bought the machine, do you?" "It is only continuing what we have always done, that's all. We bought all our furniture on the installment plan, and so paid a full fourth more for it than we should. That was one of the ways that we mismanaged. Twenty-five per cent is a great deal to give for the privilege of having a thing before we can afford it." John helped himself to another baked potato. "What should we have done about the furniture, of course, was to wait until we had saved enough to begin housekeeping free from debt before we married," began Molly. "You certainly," he said, "we had been willing to begin very simply. We need not have waited long. We should have started square with the world and probably could have kept square, ignorant and incompetent as we were." John relapsed into silence, absorbed in thinking of past mistakes. "Well, I can't see as that is any help in solving this problem," began Molly. "I must learn to sew, if I am to have anything to wear, and it will take a year to save thirty-one dollars—five dollars down and fifty cents a week. I can't get along for a year and a half without a machine. Olive Ellison is very kind and tells me to come over any time and use hers, but I simply can't make myself such a nuisance. What would you have me do?" Molly's tone was into her old complaining tone. "John was silent and Molly continued. "It isn't as if I was getting an unnecessary article of furniture that could get along without while I saved the money to get it." "Why not get a cheap second-hand machine that would last till we got out of the woods and could get a good one? I heard some man talking about a sewing machine that he got in Kansas City at the second-hand shop for ten dollars. He threw this suggestion into the conversation as a last resort to save them from going deeper into debt and he had little hope that Molly would receive it kindly. To his surprise she said, 'I would be perfectly willing to get a ten-dollar machine if it would work.' I suppose it could be used on trim." "Perhaps your agent would set one for you if he became convinced that you would not buy a new one," suggested John. Molly's tone was again cheerful and hopeful. (To be continued.)

noodles (after carefully draining them), then a layer of ham, another layer of noodles, finishing with ham for top layer. Beat two eggs and add one coffee cupful of cream or rich milk and pour over top; cover with a thin layer of bread crumbs and little dots of butter. Bake a delicate brown. Serve in dish in which it is baked.

Crust Without Lard or Butter—Take 1½ cups of flour and sift with one-half (scant) teaspoon baking powder and tiny pinch of salt. Now take one-half cup sour cream, dissolve scant one-fourth teaspoon soda in it and mix with flour. This is a very good pie crust and will not injure the stomach.

"Jingo, the Elephant"

Copy this picture on a large piece of drawing paper. Paste your drawing on a piece of cardboard or strong paper. When thoroughly dry and smooth, cut away the black parts with a sharp penknife or pointed scissors. While you are cutting, try to remember the various parts of the elephant. Be careful not to break the small white pieces which hold the different parts together. After cutting, paste narrow strips of colored tissue paper back of the openings, as follows:

Eye of white; tusks, cream; tail, ear and general outline gray; saddle and belly-band of orange; tassels, yellow. Place this in front of your light and see how it works.

LETTING THE DRIVER ALONE.

"Automobiling always tires me dreadfully," a woman said to me the other day.

Yesterday I was in a machine with her and I found out why.

She had to help run the machine all the time. She scarcely took her eyes off the road ahead for a moment, when we approached another machine, sometimes she informed our driver of the fact (how a driver does love that), other times she simply straightened up and watched the machine. When we went round a curve, instead of yielding her body to the swing of the machine, she leaned stiffly the other way as if to balance the turn and keep the car on the road. If for any reason the car slowed down quickly I could see her brace herself as if she were putting on the brakes.

She Can't See Why Riding Tires Her.

"We had a lovely drive," I said when we reached home.

"Yes," she said, "lovely; but I am so tired. I don't see why riding tires me so."

I hope someone who knows her better than I will tell her some day, but I don't see why riding tires her so.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

"SETTING AND KNITTING."

From the title of this item you might imagine it is all about grandma and her habits, but such is not the case. It is about broken bones.

Everybody who has the misfortune to have a bone fractured, knows, or thinks he knows, that things are essential parts of the recovery treatment. First, the fracture must be "set," and then it must be held in place until the ninth day, when by some means the fragments are brought back to their original position.

Nature the two or more fragments suddenly seize hold of one another and commence to "knit," or grow together.

No newspaper account of an individual instance of fracture is considered complete without the conventional statement that "Dr. Blank was summoned and reduced the fracture."

As a matter of fact Dr. Blank usually requires anywhere from a few days to two weeks to "set" or reduce the fracture. For instance, in a case of fractured femur (thigh bone) or fractured hip, it is practically impossible to bring the broken ends in contact within a week or ten days, though every effort is put forth by the surgeon to do so. The only way in which such a fracture can be immediately reduced is by cutting down upon the broken bone and wiring the fragments together.

This is a procedure that is being followed more and more frequently these days.

The reason a fractured femur resists "setting" so long is that the great muscles are in a state of continual contraction which cannot be forcibly overcome without the aid of an anesthetic. Steady, gradual pull on the leg, however, will finally coax the spasmodic muscles to release the fragments, and so, after a week or more, the broken ends are brought practically in contact.

Meanwhile the process of callous formation has gone forward from the very instant of the injury. First there is blood-clot; then, slowly, thickens "organized" as doctors say, becomes permeated by newly formed blood vessels, which carry lime salts to the clot. So that, by the time the fracture is really "set," the callous is just beginning to develop.

There is no more "knitting" on the ninth or tenth day than there is on the second day or the thirtieth. And we might also say that the "setting" of a broken bone is usually a gradual process, too.

Splints are commonly supposed to hold broken bones in place. With comparatively few exceptions splints are employed only to support the soft tissues and keep the muscles at rest while the fragments are uniting. Some fractures are better treated without splints at all. The X-ray inspection of broken bones proves that this is true.

Cook writes:—I have a chronic varicose ulcer which has refused to heal for eight years. I have tried everything under the sun, but nothing does any good. In fact most salves irritate it. Now you say all varicose ulcers can be healed. How can I get mine healed?

Answer:—By calling in a good, up-to-date doctor, one who has had hospital experience if possible, and placing yourself, entirely under his control. Salves will never help you. Our case calls for surgical judgment, not guesswork. You probably require more or less general overhauling.

YOU CAN EASILY DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Serve guests at your table from the left. When brushing crumbs from cloth between courses, stand to the left of the guest. Do not fold your napkin unless you expect to eat another meal at the same table.

It is economy at Christmas time to make all one's gifts the same color, then little odds and ends may be combined and every scrap used.

Care of Garbage Can—If rock salt is thrown in bottom of can and newspaper put in, garbage will not stick in the winter and the man will not have to jab holes in can to loosen the contents. If an old stocking is folded over handle the top will be easier to take off in cold weather.

In cleaning baby's nose, a good way to go is to wrap a small piece of dry medicated cotton on hairpin or toothpick. It being soft, cannot hurt baby.

French Stew—One and one-half pounds fresh pork cut in small pieces; stew until tender, place meat in shallow baking pan with slices of broth, add four medium-sized potatoes sliced, one small onion; season with salt and pepper. Bake one-half hour. Then make biscuit dough and cover top with small balls of dough; bake until golden brown.

Potato Cakes With Cheese.—Take left over mashed potatoes and make into rather thick cakes. Dip each in brown nicely on both sides. Take from skillet, cut each cake open and put a slice of cream cheese (any cheese will do) between; put cakes together again and return to skillet to heat through well or if you have the oven going, place them in oven about ten minutes. Be sure the potatoes are well seasoned with salt.

English Plum Pudding.—Two large cups suet chopped fine, one pound raisins, one cup currants, one quart flour. Mix all together dry, then add cold water to moisten so all will mix together nicely. Put in a cloth, tie up, place in kettle of boiling water and boil four hours. This can be made the day before wanted. Before using boil about one hour.

Sauce.—Two cups sugar, one-half cup butter, one-quarter teaspoon nutmeg, one cup water; boil while, then thicken with one large tablespoon cornstarch; season with salt. Flavor with vanilla. Serve all hot.

Hickory Nut Pie.—One cup sugar, one cup nut meats (rolled), two tablespoons flour, one cup milk. Bake in crust such as is used for cream and custard pies.

Noodle Ham.—Make noodles by beating one egg with a saltspoon of salt till very light, add as much flour as it will require to make a stiff dough (eggs vary in size so exact amount cannot be given); roll very thin and cut in narrow strips; roll these between the hands; till round like shoestrings, and break in pieces an inch or two in length; when dry put two cupfuls of them in a stewpan and pour over enough boiling water to just cover them; let boil ten minutes. Chop enough cold boiled ham to make one large coffee cupful. (In slicing ham one can save the fat and use it for cooking.) But all the crumbs and small pieces that are trimmed from the bone. But after an earthen dish; put in a layer of

A GRENADIER HAT

The model designed by Lewis of Paris suggests nothing so much as the grenadier's hat. It is practically brimless and close-fitting, and its height is increased considerably by its drapery. A wreath of white flowers sewn on a silver ribbon trims the hat effectively.

Heart and Home Problems

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, In Care of The Gazette

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am going with a fellow four years my senior. He has very nice ways and no bad habits, but I have heard rumors of his being "subject to fits." I have been going with him for about a year and his intentions are to marry me. Please tell me whether to accept him or not. He has a good position, but is very stingy with his money. He comes and spends an evening, but never offers to take me anywhere. Any good advice will be appreciated. HESSIKIAH.

Insist upon his having a thorough examination from a reputable doctor. If the doctor gives him a certificate showing that there is nothing the matter or at least nothing serious it will be safe to marry him.

Unless you love the man enough to put up with his stinginess don't marry him. There is nothing more trying in a man than stinginess.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) We are two girls to whom a conductor is very attentive. Should we flirt with him?

(2) If not, why?

(3) Should girls of fifteen or sixteen go home with boys of the church from Endeavor or any church function?

(4) No.

(5) You would cheapen yourselves and lose his respect.

(6) If they want to take you home it is better to let them than to go alone.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are chums seventeen and eighteen years old. My girl friend boards at our house. Her steady friend comes to see her about twice a week. Every night about nine o'clock my mother comes into the room and winds the clock, which makes it very embarrassing for both my friend and me. I have spoken to her several times about this, but she still insists upon doing it. What would you advise me to do?

BABY DOLL.

As long as your mother insists upon winding the clock you may as well put up with it as gracefully as possible. I can see that it would be annoying. Why don't you ask her to permit your friend to wind the clock?

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) One of my boy friends was visiting me and I took a puff of his cigar. Did I do wrong?

(2) How late should boys stay in the evening when they call on a girl fourteen years old.

(3) I have received a letter from a negro boy. This boy is very popular among the people of his town and goes with many of the white girls. I met him at a high school party and had one dance with him. Shall I answer his letter?

(4) Is it proper to correspond with a boy two years older than oneself?

(5) It was a silly thing to do, and didn't show any particular amount of intelligence.

Thompson, In Care of The Gazette

(2) Nine o'clock is late enough. (3) I think that people of the negro and white races are happier when they stick to their own people. Don't answer the letter or give him reason to think you are interested in him.

(4) Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am crocheting some little nut baskets and would like to know how or what I can do them up with?

MRS. D. L. S.

Put them in a flat box as you would a set of doll's dishes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My hands are red and ugly all the time. My fingers swell up and then crack open. My face is broken out. Please tell me what to do. M. C. S.

CORN CONTEST BOYS GUESTS AT BANQUET HEAR FARM PROGRAM

GATHERING OF CONTESTANTS
PAVES WAY FOR BET-
TERING AGRICUL-TURE.

DISCOURSES INTEREST

Speakers Cover Range of Topics and Impart Much Good to Youngsters
and Their Parents.

The most successful corn contest ever held in Rock county, from the standpoint of the number of speakers and the interest of the audience, was the banquet given in honor of the boys who took part in the contest and their parents, by the Janesville Commercial club, the sponsor for the competition, on Wednesday afternoon at a rousing affair at the St. Charles hotel. Following the banquet given in honor of the boys who took part in the contest and their parents, by the Janesville Commercial club, the results achieved in unstinted terms. J. J. Garland of state agricultural department declared that Rock county had the state in the matter of conducting successful corn growing contests and commended the spirit shown by the farmer boys in their determination to achieve good results despite the handicap of an unfavorable season.

George E. King, vice president of the Janesville Commercial club, acted in the capacity of toastmaster. In a few short opening remarks he welcomed the boys and their parents and those others who had co-operated with the local advancement association to make the project a success and finally gave an impetus to the spirit of the contest.

A. B. West of the high school agricultural department had a few words for the boys relative to the dry test as conducted by the federal government. He gave the contestants tin containers in which they are to place a sample of their seed corn and send them to Washington. The tins are enclosed in canvas sacks, the latter being addressed to the U. S. Agricultural Department.

That Rock county's annual yield of corn had increased at least a third since the corn contests and farm management and demonstration idea had been incorporated in the lives of the farmers was the contention of F. Kemmerer, president of the Clinton Grain association. Correspondingly, other farm products, oats, barley, wheat, etc., have shown marked improvement and greater yield per acre since the advent of the schemes to get the farmers to secure the best possible results from the soil.

Kemmerer contended that the west had profited materially from Wisconsin's pedigree seeds, both from bushels per acre and the quality of the crops harvested. Comparison of prices at the present time with those of two decades ago demonstrate the urgent necessity of farming advancement. Twenty years ago he said, land was cheap and it was not a matter of much importance what the yield really was. Today, with everything soaring, the farmer must raise larger crops and be better careful of his methods in doing so.

Better Body Foods.
Miss N. Beth Bailey's address, "A Balanced Diet," just preceded the soup. Waxing eloquent and humorous, coincident with the contrast of her topic and the wait for dinner, she announced herself as being better able to discuss such subjects on the stomach rather than in that period of expectancy, as the then present happened to be the case. She vouched that her audience was also in a similar frame of mind.

Gradually driving away from the by-play she led on to her topic. She discouraged the thoughts of meat assuming the position of the staff of life and felt that more cereals, vegetables and fruits were highly essential to the welfare of the future and his help—if the farmer expected to compete with his neighbor in this day of efficiency! She drew the illusion of a farmer running on a horse, and oil and securing poor results with that of the farmer giving himself, his family and his help food of the un-nourishing quality.

The real body foods are vegetables and fruits and they should be bolstered up with the addition of cereals and fruits. The fruits furnish that acid necessary for better body conditions. Foods retard digestion and are inductive of constipation, rheumatism and diseases of such nature. Bread, butter and milk are all right, she said, but they contain no iron. More milk and eggs should be eaten and meat taken sparingly. She felt that meat could easily do away with a large amount of meat eating and readily obtain physical betterment in divers ways.

J. J. Garland of the University of Wisconsin Agricultural department spoke on "State Club Work." Mr. Garland's address was highly interesting and brought out many points far as the future of the young farmers and their parents.

Unit of Success.
"The Effects of the Contests on Home Life" was fittingly considered by Mrs. W. J. Dougan of Beloit. That the competition was an inspiration that gripped the entire family was one of the main factors favoring such projects, she said. In her opinion it was highly necessary to convert the women to the idea. The more they were surmised, would readily and worthily following in the household.

Mrs. Dougan went into the economic features of the contest and while her talk was full of interest, but while her listeners of the path of discourse she used homely and plain examples to illustrate her views and readily found an interested following in the large audience.

Interest the women in the project and they will convey their men and boys to better ideas. Thus the future of the country is bound to experience a higher ideal in any line. The home is the unit. There must be the highest value to our nation at large.

Prize Winner Appears.
Harry Jaeger, the fourteen year old youngster who was awarded first honors in the contest was called upon to tell how he was able to secure 123 bushels on his acre plot at a cost of 15 cents per bushel. Harry got as far as plowing seven inches deep last fall. The rest of the corn growing methods had to be borrowed. Fertilized, sown, cultivated and harvested by the kind gentlemen who sat at the speakers' table. The youth was abashed in his first appearance before so large an audience, but was helped out by L. A. Markham, field secretary during the contest, J. A. Craig and several others.

That the second prize winner, Clarke Finley, of the town of Janesville, had also plowed to a depth of seven inches in the first working of the ground. The question arose as to how deep furrow was possible. Some was glibly answered, "It musta been with a Janesville plow."

For Better Crops.
D. F. Sayre, Jr., of Fulton delivered

an excellent paper which aside from proving highly interesting brought forth much applause and laughter. The speaker's topic was "Possibilities of Grading up Grains." It was as follows:

It has been suspicious of Mr. Markham for some time. He seems to be always getting new material into the field, that is old material into new fields. I can not exactly cipher out just what he is up to. I do not know whether he is trying harder to develop this material by discipline, or to discipline the audience in charity and endurance. I am sure this will be a test case of both.

Mr. Markham has asked me to give a little talk on the method I would use in selecting seed corn, and to give a little history of the variety I have been raising. Now for me to tell you farmers how to select seed corn, when in all probability nine tenths of you know more than I do seems ridiculous. I will have to work on this ground. I can better teach twenty men what it were best to be done than to be one of the twenty to follow my own instructions. I might be able to tell how, and yet not be able to do it.

I have for twenty years had in my mind's eye, an ear of corn; you would think to carry an ear of corn in the mind's eye for so long a time, would put it out of the mind. So you people carry as large things as horses in their minds eye, and that is the direct reason that there are so many beautiful horses.

Some people carry sheep in their mind's eye, and that is the reason that there are so many worthy sheep in the world. Some people carry one thing in their mind's eye and some another, and it has never made any one blind yet. It has made their eyes brighter, their minds clearer and their results plainer.

The Best Type Ear.
The type ear I have in my mind's eye is a large cylindrical straight rowed, longkerneled, small cobs, rich yellow dent corn, whose tip is well filled and nearly as large as the rest of the ear. It is a fullness through the body of the ear.

Whose kernels are fair width; with the greatest possible length that will insure safety in the climate in which they are grown. The ear will pop off the cob when struck like a marble out of a mill-pond, with an amber luster that looks like flint.

I would have in my mind's eye an ear just like the first, with a rich yellow color of the same shade and the indentures in the kernels such just the same, with the same thickness and the same width and the same depth, then it is the ears of the entire seed crop, just the same. That is what I would call selecting good seed corn.

You say that is a fair tale. Very well, so it is, but in practical usage select your seed ears as closely to the type in your mind's eye as possible and when you are done you will be surprised to look and behold a beautiful bunch of seed corn you have. If this is not clear instruction to Mr. Markham to hunt up some more new material that will make it so.

It has been advertised that I would speak on the possibilities of grading up grains. In my opinion there is little or no limit to such possibilities, take for instance corn. You might commence with flint, by careful selection in the course of ten years or even less you could change the whole aspect of the corn so that one would never know it ever was flint.

I used to think corn and all grains deteriorate as years go on, and that the general opinion today, I believe, that corn and other grains will run out, sure they may, but they may improve just as fast, it is all in the selection, and the soil that they are grown on.

Good Selection Essential.
My father used to take corn with a fair length kernel, and in the course of a few years, he would have to go and get a new start with longer kernels, this was because, in selecting his seed corn he always picked for the corn that would mature earliest. (Not so bad a plan at times, especially in the year 1915.) That is what made me think in my earlier years that corn always ran pick for the long kernel, and kept doing so until one time when I was in Madison I handed Professor R. A. Moore, three ears of yellow dent corn give me his unbiased opinion of them. He studied them over and then asked, "What variety of corn is this Mr. Sayre? I told him it was no particular variety, it was just corn. Well, he says, you couldn't give it a better name, it is really corn. Where did you raise it? In Rock County. How did you raise it? On clover sod, top dressed, plowed deep, well fitted, and cared

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water
with phosphate in it,
before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, turned tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddied complexion, watery eyes, all denote liver uncleanness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know of its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating cathartic which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.—Advertisement.

for and Lord made me a present of that for my trouble and work." He said, "Well, you couldn't pay Wisconsin a compliment than to say she matured that corn, but (There's always a but in everything) let me give you a little fatherly advice. You quit picking those long kernels of Janesville corn, but for you, be content with a moderate length kernel. Your corn Mr. Sayre, is a beauty, and a credit to yourself, and our state.

So you can be careful selection get a long kernel as well as a short kernel. It may go up and it may go down, the possibilities are almost limitless in either direction, the same principle will work with all grains.

But, like the young German, if you go too far, you are liable to repent. The young German got married, and gave to the minister for his services in performing the ceremony a pig, but before a year was up, he went back to the minister and said, "Mr. Van Heimer, didn't I give you a pig to marry me? Yes, my dear young man you surely did, and thank you for it." "Well then, I will give you two pigs if you will unmarry me."

Ground Dressing.
Now, how do we get the good seed described? When you plant your grain seed heavily with clover, and crop of clover hay, cut one from ten to twelve of good berrary manure, plow seven inches deep, to finish, plant from the 10th to the 25th day of May cultivate frequently, follow the next year with clover, and seed heavily with clover, with your clover for hay, top dress and follow up that practice and you will find that you will raise good grain, good clover, and good corn, and you will ever be free from grub worms, at least I never did.

There is one thing ladies and gentlemen, I wish to impress upon your minds I do nothing else, (If rhyme—be was fond of repeating subject). You and I have no moral right to hand our farms down to our children in any poorer condition than we have when we received them, they have just as many rights and deserve just as many privileges as we have. We have no more moral right to impoverish our soils than we have to steal a sheep. Let us then strive hard to bring a credit to ourselves and blessing to posterity. Let us put that in our pipes and smoke it. It is really the only fit stuff to smoke.

Let us have a legacy that an ear of corn with a small cob, and a long kernel will mature about as quickly, as a big cob and a short kernel. But I decide just wherein the discrimination is to the proper length of a kernel lies, the proper battle to be fought, in the entire process for me. Perhaps Mr. Craig can tell you. Mr. Markham or Professor Moore.

The awarding of the prizes to the contestants of both the acre contest and the ten ear contest closed the afternoon's program.

WOMAN IN SUIT FOR
DAUGHTER IN JAPAN
WINS FIRST DECISION

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Tokio, Dec. 9.—Mrs. Harriet A. Ellis of Massachusetts has won the first decision in the battle for the possession of her child which has engaged the attention of two courts.

As reported by cable yesterday, the district court of Tokio handed down a judgment against Mr. John Ellis in the suit brought by his wife for the permanent possession of their eight-year-old daughter, Olga Natalie. Mr. Ellis at once made an appeal to the Tokio court of appeal, announcing that if the appeal court rules against him, he will continue the fight to the supreme court of Japan. It is expected that the case will require another six months or a year for definite settlement.

It is likely that Mrs. Ellis will apply for a temporary order from the court for the immediate custody of the child pending the result of the appeal. This temporary possession will probably be opposed by the defendant.

The Japanese court reached its decision without going into the question of the respective fitness of the parties to act as the girl's guardian. The judges refused to consider this point of the case. They held that the decision of the court of Massachusetts, from which Mrs. Ellis had two degrees giving her the custody of her daughter, has created a legal status that ought to be recognized in Japan, just as the status of marriage performed abroad is recognized here. The decision was based largely on consideration of public policy, it being the attitude of the court that a judgment against Mrs. Ellis would affect the validity of the law of Japan in similar cases in the United States.

Mr. Ellis, who is a teacher of English in the Higher Commercial school, took his daughter from his wife in 1913 and came to Japan. An attempt to have him extradited having failed, Mrs. Ellis herself came to Japan to begin the fight for the custody of her daughter. All attempts at reconciliation of the couple have failed.

LINCOLN'S FAVORITE POEM
TO BE FOUND IN
"HEART THROBS."

There was always a strain of sadness and mystery in Abraham Lincoln. Born to sound the depths of human existence, he was subject at times to moods of brooding melancholy. We look in vain for any explanation from his own words. His numerous biographers do not satisfy us on this point. But when we know that his favorite poem was William Knox's famous verses "Why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" we seem to have some clew to the cause underlying this sombre trait of his character. Great men do not wear their hearts upon their sleeves. They are reticent concerning their inner lives, even to their intimates. But when we know the books they read, the verses that were their favorites, we can trace the trend of their hidden feelings. This wonderful poem, found in "Heart Throbs" in volume 1, may be said to expound a part, at least, of Lincoln's philosophy. Told in simple language, of a backwoody nature and a homespun stanzas from it, and often would read the entire composition. To read it and know it, is much better to understand this heroic figure of American history. We find in "Heart Throbs" many contributions that stand out with an emphasis equally important. The original manner in which these volumes were gotten together could result in nothing else.

VINCENNES CELEBRATES
100TH ANNIVERSARY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Vincennes, Ind., Dec. 9.—Vincennes today began a three-day celebration of the 100th anniversary of its change from a military post to a civic organization, with visitors and former residents of the city from all parts of the country in attendance. The place was settled as a military post in 1702 by Francis Morgan of Vincennes, who a few years later was burned at the stake by Indians.

One of the features of the celebration will be the visit of governors of the states, which formerly comprised the Northwest Territory when Vincennes was the seat of government. On the invitation of Gov. Samuel M. Ralston of Indiana, the executives of Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota promised to attend or send a representative, if possible. The governors present will meet in the old Harrison Mansion—Grouseland—the home of William Henry Harrison when he was governor of the territory. The governors will also be asked to address mass meetings held at different times during the celebration. James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, was asked to be here Friday, Dec. 10, which has been set aside as Children's day, but probably will be unable to attend.

Hot Tea Breaks
A COLD-TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Brest Tea, a German folk, call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve, and drink a teaspoonful at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette December 9, 1875.—The question now is, shall the cotton factory be enlarged by the addition of one hundred looms? The constantly increasing demand for the goods is making the question an earnest one. When book agents reap an abundant harvest, there is no occasion for the cry of hard times, for they never succeed if the people feel poor. This fall and winter has been a very propitious season for these ubiquitous persons.

U. S. MUST REVISE TREATIES AFTER WAR

COMMERCIAL PACTS WITH BEL-LIGERENTS WILL NEED
CHANGING SAYS JOHN
B. MOORE.

TALK TRADE PROBLEMS

Need of Popularizing Foreign Investments is Subject Discussed by Speakers at Trade Conference.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, Dec. 9.—John Bassett
Moore, former counsel of the State Department, in an address before the session of the International Trade Conference, expressed the opinion that the United States, at the conclusion of the European war, would find it necessary to revise or supplement all existing commercial treaties with the countries now at war.
"In spite of the prevailing uncertainty as to the duration of the present war," Mr. Moore said, "the commercial world is anxiously looking forward to the time when normal trade relations will be restored and competition again become general and active."

"It is an admitted principle of international law that, with the exception of engagements specially applicable to a state of hostilities, war abrogates all treaties between the belligerents of an executory nature,
under which the belligerents have commercial agreements. It will therefore be necessary, when peace is re-established, for the countries now at war to take up without delay the question of conditions and regulations of trade."

Commercial Treaties.
"With the exception of Russia, with whom the treaty of commerce and navigation of 1832 had been terminated, the United States at the outbreak of hostilities had commercial treaties with all of the belligerents. As these treaties contained neutral provisions, they had not been disturbed, but it is by no means certain that they will not have to be revised or supplemented, in order to meet new arrangements between the countries now at war."

Mr. Moore discussed the various reciprocity agreements during the
past sixty-five years and expressed
the opinion that while reciprocity in
many cases proved of considerable
benefit to the countries entering the
agreement, reciprocity agreements between the United States and South
American countries have never been successful. In discussing general
trade with Latin American countries,
Mr. Moore expressed doubt that the mercantile community of the United States had as yet shown a capacity
to fully meet the situation in Latin America.

Gonzales' Address.
V. Gonzales, banking adviser of the National Association of Manufacturers,
addressing the International Trade Conference here, warned American business men that they were sowing the seeds of possible disaster in exacting too harsh terms from the present necessities of European customers.

Mr. Gonzales urged the co-operation of shipping interests, merchants,
bankers, investors and manufacturers
to arrange for an adequate and fair credit system for foreign buyers so as to avert the growth of hostility and ill-will which threatened disastrously to the United States after the war ends.

"At the time when a tire was suffering may mean in the end an increased amount of wealth to the country, but it cannot and will not buy good will or make any lasting connections for the future unless it will help others out of their troubles
as well."

"This assistance rendered to other countries, however platonically it may be looked at, is one of the business proposition after all, and it is not to take the form of loans nor benevolent subscriptions to aid the needy,
but simply and purely the affording
of commercial and financial credit for commercial and financial purposes."

Mr. Gonzales declared that one of the most urgent needs of the international business world at the present time was the establishment of a clearing center to take the place which the war has forced London to vacate. He pointed out that New York was the logical and inevitable successor to the British metropolis as the world's money center. At the same time he said that America was in a position to take the place of London as the world's money center,
but was compelled to take London's place to save other nations and her own trade.

Trade Paralyzed.
Returning to the question of the treatment of foreign customers, Mr.
Gonzales said:

"The diversion of the European industries to the manufacture of deadly weapons, the displacement of financial machinery available for foreign trade of the countries at war,
and even the call to the front of
many of their ablest business men,
has caused a quasi-paralysis of their export trade, leaving the world in our hands and at our mercy."

"What have we done to take care
of that world thus thrown to us?
A few exceptions we have enforced
the most rigid conditions of payment
cash in New York against shipping papers when no money in advance
came demand for a flat and un-welcomed demand for money in advance. But this, while it has brought us
the money and our coffers are nearly confined, has made no friends for us.
Many foreign customers who have done home with vengeance in their hearts and determined to go back to Europe as soon as Europe is on its feet again have been reinforcing the future trade of Europe against our own while we have been deceiving ourselves with swollen figures for the present."

Mr. Gonzales proposed as a partial remedy the establishment of a system of credit of not less than ninety days or more than six months to be extended to reliable merchants in all countries.

Advocates Board.
The creation of a Federal board of shipping to supervise the granting of ship subsidies as a step toward the building up of a merchant marine
was advocated today by Emory R. Johnson, professor of transportation and commerce in the University of Pennsylvania, in an address
before the International Trade Conference.

Professor Johnson declared that the European war had brought home the need of an adequate marine service to protect American trade. He said that the only thing that had saved American foreign commerce was the fact that the seas had been controlled by Great Britain, a power which controlled two-fifths of the world's ocean-carrying business.

"If the European war," he said,
"were being waged on the sea as widely as it is being fought on the land, American foreign commerce would be practically paralyzed at the present time."

Professor Johnson said the urgency of the present situation imposed on Congress the obligation to agree upon comprehensive legislation for the end the inequality between the navigation laws of the United States

and those of other maritime nations.
"There can be no hope," he said, "of security in the service of the foreign trade of the United States unless the American flag is the conditions of operating vessels under the flag of the United States are more favorable
than the requirements of the navigation laws of other countries."

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Washington, Dec. 9.—The National Rivers and Harbors Congress is not engaged in the promotion of "pork."
The rivers and harbor development of the country is necessary to prosperity. The usual appropriations are expected to be made by Congress this year. Instead of attempting to save money on this end, Congress should appreciate that true preparedness is linked with industrial prosperity,
which depends upon good waterways.
These were points made by Senator
Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana, president of the Congress, in his annual address before the convention of that organization which opened here today.

The first day's program two major issues were emphasized by the speakers. The first was that waterways are essential to a rational preparedness plan; the second that co-operation in the development of railroads
and highways as well as waterways work to the betterment of conditions
in all three and the country at large.
Senator Ransdell pointed out that everything which goes into the rivers and harbors bill before Congress must be for the benefit of the country.
"These are the points," he said, "that engineers and of the Rivers and Harbors
and the Commerce committees."

"The reputations of these men are slandered when it is said that this bill involves the distribution of pork,"
he said.

Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce discussed cheap transportation, the secretary pointed out the saving by large transportation, and declared he favored economical waterway development.

J. Hampton Moore, president of the Atlantic Deep Waterways Association, spoke on "Rivers and Harbors Preparedness?" and declared that waterways must be developed so that in case of war communication between cities would not be broken by blockades, and industries would be built up to a point where they would be able to stand the strain of war. Paul
W. Brown, editor of the St. Louis Republic, spoke on "Rivers and Harbors showing that in Europe where canals
feed and are fed straight by railroads, both have benefited. H. L.
Whittemore of the Suto Car Company of Ardmore, Pa., spoke on "The Motor Truck in General Transportation."

Mr. Moore discussed the various
reciprocity agreements during the
past sixty-five years and expressed
the opinion that while reciprocity in
many cases proved of considerable
benefit to the countries entering the
agreement, reciprocity agreements between the United States and South
American countries have never been successful. In discussing general
trade with Latin American countries,
Mr. Moore expressed doubt that the
mercantile community of the United States had as yet shown a capacity
to fully meet the situation in Latin America.

DUTCH GOVERNMENT STOPS IMMIGRATION OF METAL WORKERS

Restrictions Placed to Prevent Export Workmen Going to England
for Higher Wages.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
The Hague, Netherlands, Dec. 9.—
The restriction by the Dutch government of the movements of metal workers who were intending to go to Great Britain to take advantage of the high wages there, has called attention to the position of the Netherlands in connection with war supplies.

The enforcement of the regulations
was a surprise to the workmen concerned, several thousands of whose comrades had been employed in German munition factories since the beginning of the war. The labor representatives who conferred with the government officials were told that the action of the authorities was necessary because so many men were leaving the country in case of need,
and that the prohibited emigration is now applicable without regard to which country they might wish to go.

The Metal Workers' union has entered a vigorous protest against the stoppage of its members' emigration,
and has brought forward statistics to show that many of them are out of work in this country. At the same time the union demands in case the order should remain in force, an increase of 35 per cent in the men's wages, and the government is considering the problem from the point of view as it affects the workers in the government factories.

For many years some of the Dutch newspapers have been calling attention to the necessity of establishing efficient arsenals and ammunition factories under Dutch control to provide sufficient war material for the Dutch army under all conditions, instead of leaving the military equipment of the country as hitherto dependent on foreign contractors. Possibly as a result of this agitation, the state since January, 1912, has possessed an arms and ammunition factory on the Hom-brug, at Amsterdam, and an arsenal at Delft. These state institutions have been recently extended to include the construction of a large part of flying machines and sea mines, but the entire output is based on the requirements of the small Dutch army on a peace footing.

Much has been done since the beginning of the European war to place
the Dutch army in a position to cope with modern conditions of fighting.

Under the circumstances the government deems it unwise to publish even approximate figures as to what has been done, but it may be taken as a fact that the Netherlands are prepared for most eventualities.

The army possesses a good rifle,
rifle made as compared with others
in use in Europe, and the country has enough of them to arm all its trained infantrymen. Rifle ammunition, too, is in hand in satisfactory quantities, reckoned on the basis of the immense numbers of cartridges fired off in modern engagements. Several private factories are engaged in manufacturing
still further large quantities of these
as well as artillery ammunition under
the supervision of the munitions committee of the government.

As to the Dutch artillery, the army
experts have followed closely the operations going on all around. They have made their calculations as to the number of shells to have ready for each piece of ordnance and in all probability has provided for even greater quantities of shells than were considered indispensable by the French and German gunnery experts before the opening of hostilities. Provision for each piece of ordnance sent out in modern engagements. Several private factories are engaged in manufacturing
still further large quantities of these
as well as artillery ammunition under
the supervision of the munitions committee of the government.

As to the guns themselves the Dutch have come to the conclusion that their artillery must be strengthened, and it is believed that much has already been accomplished in this direction, both as regards light and heavy field pieces and machine guns. The ordinary field machine guns in use in the Dutch army do not differ very greatly from the Austrian 8-centimeter weapons. They have also a very light field piece of 6-centimeters caliber, handy for use in broken ground such as is found everywhere in the Netherlands. As to heavier mobile pieces, some of the fortress guns are capable of being provided with field
carriages, and in this way guns of 10, 12 and 15-centimeter bore could be placed in the field.

In Holland the guns of the field artillery have many times to be carried by water and the guns are often exercised in this transportation. In every irrigation canal are numerous shallow flat-bottomed scows used for the carrying of cattle and manure. These are put to use by the artillerymen.
Two of them are laced side by side
and made fast. The gun and its carriage are then shipped aboard along scows holding two of the wheels, in this way most of the difficulties of the ground, when cut up by canals, are overcome.

GET IT FIRST—NOT LAST

When a cold grips your system it is convincing proof that your condition is weakened—remember that. It is risky indeed to simply trust your strength to throw it off, because neglected colds
have brought more serious sickness than any other one thing, while weakening cathartics and stimulating syrups
are often depressing and dangerous.

The one best treatment for any cold
—the one so often relied on when others
fail, is the powerful blood-nourishment
in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the very sources of bodily strength to suppress the present cold and generate strength to thwart further sickness.

Get Scott's first, not last—and insist on the genuine—always free from alcohol and injurious drugs.
